

Progression in writing

For English leaders - 3-day course

Supporting and developing writing across the whole school is challenging. To know and feel confident about the standards in every year group, to understand how different genres become increasingly sophisticated, and being clear on how common barriers can be addressed is essential for the effective leadership of writing. Being able to support, challenge and champion the teaching of writing requires a firm grasp of writing progression.

If you want to feel confident when reviewing pupils' writing and discussing pupil outcomes from EYFS to Year 6, then this is the right course for you.

If you want to have the background knowledge necessary to be able to evaluate writing in your school so that you can create effective plans for improvement, then this course will provide you with everything you need.

If you want to be able to support colleagues in all year groups and give advice and guidance on how to address common issues and improve the teaching of writing, then you will find this three-day course extremely worthwhile.

This course:

- supports leaders to understand expectations and standards from EYFS to Year 6;
- unpicks progression from EYFS to Year 6 in a range of genres, e.g. stories, recounts, instruction writing, information texts, writing to persuade, book reviews - enabling leaders to ably support colleagues in ensuring writing becomes increasingly sophisticated;
- identifies common problems pupils experience and ensures leaders are well equipped to advise colleagues on how they can be resolved;
- explores the essential elements of high impact lessons and units of work;
- considers how writing can be driven through the wider curriculum, through experiences and through high-quality texts; and
- provides materials for cascading training in school and working one-to-one with colleagues.

Face to face days allow colleagues to study writing progression in depth and an online learning environment supports colleagues to put ideas into action back at school.

Evaluations from previous courses:

"Excellent course. Really useful and practical. Clear resources that will help with sequencing of teaching. Great ideas for sentence level work and different build-up activities."

"Exceeded expectations and excited to share with other staff."

"Definitely helped as writing coordinator – thanks for all your support and advice."

"Excellent as ever and full of content that is useful."

"Fully met expectations. Vicky is so open and approachable. Loved the personal touches."
